TEXT BOOKS AND SALARIES SUCCESSOR TO DR. BARTLETT.

East Washington Citizens' Association Discuss Them.

MR. WELLER'S PLAIN LANGUAGE

Thinks Supt. Powell's Submission of His Own Work to the Judgment of Principals Is Dangerously Close to Corruption-Teachers' Pay Ought to Be Increased.

School books, gymnaxiums and teachers' salaries were discussed by the committee on schools for the East Washington Association, at Wallach school jast night. Upon invitation M. I. Weller, Prof. John Freeman, and J. W. Bubson were present.

Mr. Weller set forth at length his ideas for escaping from paying tribute to the book trust or any other publishers. He said it had been charged that $5,000 was paid during the last Congress by a firm of book publishers to influence legislation regarding books, and that a supervising principal had resigned his position in order to lobby for certain publishers.

He did not propose to go into these sharges. He referred to them merely to explain why he made the proposals he had laid before the association. He had heard that certain renders had been referred to the supervising principals of the schools for their approval, with a view to adoption in the schools. If these principals were capable of do not make sufficient use of our beds. I criticising the books and determining whether they ought to be used, they were capable of writing text books that would be satisfactory. The readers referred to were in part written by Supt. William B. Powell, and it seemed improper that they who were subordinates of the superintendent should be set to judge whether his books should be used. It would be human nature for them to be influenced in their decision by their personal interest.

Furthermore he regarded it as improper for the superintendent to have his reader copyrighted and introduced into the schools.

No employe in the other departments of the government is allowed to make a profit from his work under similar cfroumstances. He had nothing against Mr. Powell, whom he had met only a few times, but he considered this a species of corruption. It was suggested by Principal Stuart that a law passed at the last session of Congress prevented any one in the employ of the schools from making money from any book he might publish. Mr. Weller answered he knew that because

Mr. Weller answered he knew that because he had written the law that was passed, but it had been emasculated in the Senata. The law as passed prohibited a profit from sales in the District, but not in the country at large. He spoke of these things now, however, only to give reasons for his plan.

This was for the supervising principals to prepare all the text books to be used in the District, and to have them published at the Government Printing Office. The District would thus own the copyright and the books. The cost of the first is sues would be greater than for books bought of publishers, but subsequent editions would be cheaper. To a sugthan for books bought of publishers, our subsequent editions would be cheaper. To a suggestion of Prof. Freeman that California had tried the plan of publishing her own books, he replied that probably they had not gone about it in the right way. He asked Principal Stuart about the feasibility of having the texts of required books written by the principals.

Mr. Stuart replied that the publishing ar. Stuart replied that the publishing houses employ men of special filtness for the work at large salaries to do this work, and that principals would not have the time to do the work well in connection with their other

Mr. Babson suggested that representatives of school committees of other associations be invited to meet with this committee and there was a discussion whether this would be better or to wait till plans had been perfected and reported to the East Washington Association. An invitation from B. P. Mann to meet

Hubbell was designated to consult with Commissioner of Education Harris. It was proposed if possible, to place the proposition of text-books under his charge.

Mr. Weller also read from a report of the District Committee of the House, before which Supt. Powell had appeared, and in which it was shown that he had practically the choice of books for the schools. He presented lists of bids from Ballantyne, of Washington, and Duhaney, of Baitimore, by which it appeared, he alleged, that there was and among other labors which he conducted and which brought his name before the pub-lic were experiments upon swine in further-ance of an inoculation theory, which the scien-tific men of the department smile at. The news that the Hamburg authorities passed two car-goes of cattle as healthy, and that Prussian sanitary officers, who were ordered to Ham-burg, discovered Texas fever, confirms the belief at the Agricultural Department that the exclusion of American cattle was inspired by the government as a retailatory measure against that clause of the sugar schedule which operated against German interests.
